

Question:

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? In learning about life, the advice of family is more important than personal experience. Please give specific reasons, details, and examples to develop your essay.

Dr. Parvize Hessobi, the father of modern physics in Iran, is well-known for his brilliant academic achievements but also the way he finds his way through the life and learns new things which give him a admiration and bring him to this sky-high position. How do Dr. Hessobi and other successful persons learn their most important lessons in their life? Some people believe the family's help and listening to their advice is the key factor in learning important life's lessons. Conversely, other persons are of this opinion that personal experience is more important. When it comes to this debate, I choose the latter notion due to following reasons.

First and foremost, most of the time the best way of learning a phenomenon is doing it. In some cases the only way of learning is experiencing or trying. For instance, consider the situation you want to learn how to drive and you can consult the world's best drivers. Do you think after all the advice from these experts you could still even park your car in your garage? Obviously, the answer is no. Thus, how could anyone teach the most important lesson by just listening to the advice of limited member of the family who are not complete and successful in their own lives.

In the second place, every action that we do involves some requirement before it and is followed by other actions. As experiencing is not exempt except from this rule prior to doing everything we need to get introduced to that action or problem and the best way to be familiarizing with it is to speaking to some experts on that field. Accordingly, having a try in life's problems involving getting advice and listening to the specialists and consult with them. Thus, by experiencing the life's problems personally we have the advice of our convenience family.

Finally, by considering the world as a dynamic system, every advice from the family member is not approvable to the current time because their guidelines are based on their time of experience. Moreover, the counselor have a different personality and talents which analyze the life from his perspective. For example, when I wanted to go to university I talked to my elder/older brother who is the most similar one to me about selecting my major. Now after losing five years of my life I have come to a point where I want to change my field from computer science to a totally different one such as politics. Getting advice from my brother showed me that do not trust in anyone but myself everyone except the case that one is yourself. Thus, the only way for learning in life is experiencing it just by yourself.
