Some people think that parents should teach children how to be good person in society., Others, however, believe that school is a place to learn this.
Discuss both these vies and give your own opinion.

There are two points of view about who should ~~thought~~ teach an innocent child to be a good member of society. Firstly, those who argue that parents must teach them, and the others who believe in professional teachers in school who should carry out ~~do~~ this process.

First of all, we must not forget that parents are the first teachers of their child and their children spend at least six years learning from the parents' reactions in real life. Therefore, so caring a parent~~s~~ is ~~are~~ one ~~those~~ who know~~s~~ how to act as a good person in front of their kids in family as a small society. The parent~~s~~'s behavior not only does affect their children, but also it shows them the other people's reaction to a decent ~~nice~~ manner.

Second of all, schools are a bigger society group in which kids start~~s~~ to relate with their peers and could be ~~tough~~ taught in different ~~deferent~~ situations. School~~'s~~ teachers should teach/educate/train/nurture ~~thought~~ them how to behave and be a kind person in society. However, all these theories must be adopted ~~taken~~ in cooperation ~~action~~ with their parents. Like other fields of sports and or science exams, schools also can represent achievements for children's act of kindness such as helping their teachers or peers.

In conclusion, in my opinion both parents as first teachers and professional school~~'s~~ teachers have the main role in creating a useful ~~and good~~ person in society from a child. The more we raise ~~arose~~ our children's awareness about being a good humankind, the better society we would have in future.